National University of Health Sciences

A CUSTOMIZED SOLUTION FOR A STANDARDIZED SYSTEM

Founded in 1906, the National University of Health Sciences (NUHS) is a leader in career training for health care. They are a part of a growing field of integrative medicine, balancing healing arts and science with patient-centered care.

The Challenge

Spanning several states, the NUHS organization had a patchwork of systems in need of updates. Outdated and non-uniform software created a poor user experience and overwhelmed NUHS' IT staff. The university also had difficulties adopting new technologies and integrating them with their existing software.

The Solution

Elevity has supplied office hardware for the university for many years. After meeting with administrative officials, Elevity experts offered NUHS a customized solution that could be standardized across campuses. The software could also be updated and monitored remotely, and the new solution integrated seamlessly with existing programs.

The Results

The customized solution offered NUHS a hybrid IT environment that easily integrated with existing personnel and systems. It is a user-friendly system that can be used across campuses, software updates occur regularly and work stations are more secure. The software also has easy-to-use reporting tools so officials have more knowledge and information available about their systems.
